HENRI II. HAT WITH UPSTANDING FEATHER.

Period millinery is on every hand—or rather on every head, and Henri II and IV, Louis XIII and XV chapeaux mingle at every fashionable festivity. The jaunty Henri II hat has very little trimming—merely an upstanding feather or one of the new fancy quills which are a trimming in themselves, so fluffy and spreading is the plumage. This dark blue hat is made entirely of velvet, the quill showing blues and peacock green shadings.

LACE SCARFS ARE FOR THE MATRON ONLY.

The dignity and distinction of a real lace evening scarf are not for the debutante, nor—if she is wise—for the girl in her first or second season. These scarfs, graped over colored costumes, are extremely effective, every detail of the handsome lace pattern showing up over the tint of the satin beneath. Spanish and chantilly patterns are the favorites for these black scarfs, and over white or black costumes they are most dignified and impressive.
